The Art Seems Now to be Almost at Its Height.
Being photographed nowadays is an elaborate process. Heretofore, when a woman wanted her photograph taken, she went to the studio and arranged about the size of the picture and the number she wanted. She gave a reassuring touch to her hair, sat down before the camera, turned her head a little to the right or to the left, as the artist desired, and, clamped on either temple, grazed fixedly, insidiously, or

NEWS FROM THE COUNTRY

MORVEN.
The weather here is very dry and grain and meadows need rain very much. The hay crop is likely to be light. The apple crop will be larger than at first expected. Some of the grain crops are looking well.
Our school is progressing very nicely under the able management of Miss Pollard. Some four or five are intending to write on entrance examinations.
There will (D. V.) be a strawberry and ice cream festival in Brick church, Morven, on Tuesday evening June 25th. Admittance only 25 cents, children 15 cts. An excellent programme consisting of recitations, readings by local and foreign talent; vocal and instrumental music by the choir and others and an address by Rev. Mr. McCullough, of Newburgh. Chair taken at 8 p.m. The committee will spare no pains to make this the entertainment of the season.

BELL ROCK.
The weather is very hot during the day but the nights are fine and cool. We had a heavy rain two weeks ago but none since.
The men have about completed the statute labor which will make quite an improvement in the roads.
Geo. Perault is building a barn 48ft. by 54ft. and 4ft. from the ground to the peak. Segriff Bros delivered 1,340 lbs. of milk at the factory on Monday morning.
Mr. Roach is doing quite a lively trade in his general store.
The teachers of the Sunday School intend holding a picnic on Wed. the 26th of June. We hope the weather will be favorable.
Rev. Mr. Williamson preached his farewell sermon on Sunday. He goes to Gananoque on Wednesday.
The F. M. Services on Sunday, in Verona, drew a large number of people from here.
Visitors.—Mr. Burrill of Nananee at G. M. York's. Mrs. Delme, of Hartington, at Mrs. Martin's. Mrs. Lawson and Maggie Rutan at Jas. Rutan's, Fourth Lake.

HAY BAY.
Rain is very much needed through this district, as ploughman says the ground is very dry.
Mr. Elmore Wells, of Prince Edward, is the guest of his sister, Mrs. D. A. McCabe at present.
Miss Daisy McCabe, of Nananee, is spending a few days with her cousin, Miss Mabel McCabe at this place.
Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Sharks and children, of Greta, were the guests of Mr. J. A. Moore on Sunday last.
Mr. and Mrs. Philip Young, of Greta, were the guests of Mr. M. E. Post on Sunday last.
Berry picking is all the go, every young man that has a girl is kind enough to assist her father in the berry business.
Mr. Johnston Wagar visited his parents at Sillsville on Sunday last.
What makes so many of our young men go to town on Sunday evenings. They say that is just where the pretty girls are.
It is rumored that a young man from the other shore is good on fishing as he makes it a practice to troll across and back again every Sunday evening, probably a chance of bait would be good for him.
Quite a number from here attended the demonstration at Forester's Island on Monday last.
Mr. Chester Kellar, of this place, was the guest of Mr. John Kellar, of Marysville, on Sunday last.

PRINCE EDWARD COUNTY.
A large number of people from various parts of the county attended the Forester's picnic at Forester Island Park, on Monday last.
Strawberry picking is now the order of the day. The late frosts are said to have injured the strawberry crop considerably in this county.
Rain is badly needed here. The hay in many places will scarcely be worth har-traveller arrived a stranger among strangers, unfamiliar with the language of those he met, with no one to meet him as he expected or to direct him. Unfortunately his baggage had probably been misdirected for it did not arrive with the same train nor with the next, and he has up to date not been able to get any tidings of it. He is however, no one of the desponding kind and made his way back to Carleton Place, where he got on the right line and succeeded in reaching Kaladar Station at last from whence he proceeded to Cloyne. There he fortunately met Chas. P. Stein of this place and the Rev. E. Weber who made room for him in their conveyance and brought him safe to his final destination. He is very favorably impressed with Denbigh, its surroundings and inhabitants and intends to extend his visit at least till September or October next.

During the three weeks in May in which the Denbigh cheese factory has been in operation 38,698 lbs. of milk have been delivered at Lavant Station. G. Stein and Ed. Fritsch took each a load there on Tuesday last.
Herman Glaeser has been building a new frame barn with stone basement stables. August Hartwig, of Bancroft, did the stone mason work in a most creditable manner and Albert Crabtree did the carpenter work in first class style. Reinhold Petzold is building a similar barn this week.
Mr. A. Hartwig has also built the cellars and foundation for the new Lutheran parsonage. The carpenters, a firm from Eganville will probably begin their work on it next week.

Smith's Grocery.
Mr. Jake Smith has recently had plate glass windows put in his grocery store, and in one of the windows, where the vegetables and garden stuff are kept, an ingenious water spray has been erected in the centre, and by this arrangement the vegetables are kept green, fresh and whole some.

The Dame Durden Society.
Will give a Lawn Social, on the beautiful lawn of Mr. T. G. Carscallen to night. Ice cream, strawberries, and cake will be served. The lawn will be illuminated with Japanese lanterns, and a broom brigade drill will be given. The 47th Batt. Band will be in attendance. Tickets only 15 cents. The proceeds will be devoted to charitable purposes.

Escaped from Gaol.
John Mack the horse thief, who was sentenced to one years imprisonment by Police Magistrate Daly last week, made his escape from the Nananee gaol on Tuesday afternoon. A ladder had been left in the yard, and Mack used it in scaling the wall, first exchanging his prison garb for a suit of clothes that he came across in the kitchen of the gaol. Mack is evidently a cunning rascal. Before receiving his trial he was detected in the act of attempting to file the bars of his cell. He is still at liberty.

The following Napanee people visited our town Tuesday: W. F. Hall, G. M. Taylor, Mrs. Bignart, Miss Carrie Bignart, Mrs. Symington, Geo. Elliot, Dr. Edwards, Mrs. J. H. Madden, Miss Edith Hooper, Mrs. R. Boyce, Mrs. Geo. Schryver. Miss Symington, of Scotland, visited Picton with the Napanee excursion Tuesday. Miss Ruby McFarland returned home on Monday after spending a day with Mrs. Mabel Brishin, Ferguson street.

Mr. L. Empey, of Napanee, has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. A. Hoover the past week. Messrs. Geo. Goodwin, of Napanee, and Geo. O'Keefe, of Belleville, visited the former's sister, Mrs. John M. Goodwin, on Monday. Mr. Henry, of Napanee, was in town this week. Mr. and Mrs. Pringle and children and Mr. Sills, of Napanee, were last week guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Leaven, Hallowell.

The steam yacht Dorothy, owned by Captain. Holmes, of Napanee, was here on Sunday with the following party on board: Capt. and Mrs. Holmes, Mr. and Mrs. W. K. Pruyn, Mr. Fred Richardson, Mr. S. L. Jones, Mr. McDougall, Mr. J. O. Robertson, Misses C. Grange, Miss Herring, Mr. McNaughton and Miss Giesworth. They remained for some time and seemed to thoroughly enjoy the delightful scenery in this vicinity. The Capt. says he will soon have a larger yacht, the present craft being too small to suit his tastes.

Mrs. Dr. Badgley, of Toronto, has just returned home after staying a few days with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Bell, York road.

Mr. W. Crowley, of Kingston, has been visiting friends in town.

Mrs. Williams, of Toronto, is the guest of her mother, Mrs. Allen, East street.

Mr. A. N. McKim, of Montreal, was in town this week attending his sister's wedding.

Mr. Fred Warner, of Toronto, was home on Sunday and Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. O'Brien and two children who have been visiting at D. S. Warner's, left for Stratford Monday evening.

Mrs. A. E. Lang was visiting friends in Kingston last week.

Mr. and Mrs. John Thompson and Mrs. Finkle took in the Picnic at Forester's Island, near Deseronto, Monday last.

Warrie and Ted Eakins, sons of Dr. Eakins, who went to Napanee Saturday on their bicycle to spend Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Lang.

Miss Smith, of Utica, after spending two weeks with her sister, Mrs. Stanley C. Warner, left for home Saturday morning, taking Ethel with her.

Mr. and Mrs. Mill and Mr. Isaac Lockwood, of our town, with a number of others took to Brockville excursion.

MARRIAGES.

BAXTER REID.—At Napanee, on June 12th, Thos. J. Baxter, Sheffield, to Miss Adda Florence Reid Reidville.

DEATHS.

ELIZA PULTZ.—On June 11th, 1895, at her residence, Wilton, Eliza Pultz, widow of the late Henry Pultz, aged 79 years.

Nature in a playful mood.

The wind storm on Saturday last caught the front door of Haines & Lockett's boot and shoe store in its gentle clasp and slammed it shut, smashing the $7.50 plate glass in it all to smithereens.

Horse Drowned.

While Andy Kelly was watering his horse at the river down by the old cement works on Tuesday morning, it tripped and fell headlong into the water. The horse was blind, and it swam out into the centre of the river, then turned and made for the shore. When it was climbing up the bank its foot got caught in the halter shank and this swung its head around, and it again struck out into the river. It floundered around in the water for some time, till it became exhausted, and was drowned. The horse was a valuable animal, about four years of age.

BETWEEN YOU AND I.

It seems to me that a fire in a school room, when the thermometer registers 90 in the shade, is just a trifle out of place.

There were some pretty long faces among the school board on Tuesday evening last. Public opinion is very hard to oppose.

If tea and coffee comes induty free, why? Is it because tea and coffee cannot be grown here, and the interest of a bloated monopolist cannot be interfered with.

If the price of Canadian coal oil is raised through sympathy, because American coal oil is advanced in price, where does the difference in the price go to? It can't be possible that the refiners put it in their pockets. Probably they give it to the temple, kazed fixedly, inspidly, or otherwise, at a spot on the wall. Now the subject's "possibilities" are studied in detail. Nothing is left to accident. The fashionable woman carries her various gowns to the studio with her, and tries them on, each in turn, that the artist may decide which suits her best. She pays $50 for the photographs. Her hair is arranged by skillful hands in different ways, and a style of coiffure may be chosen which will be appropriate not only to the contour of her face and head, but to the environments of the picture. The subject's hands and arms are articulated, likewise her throat and neck, to see whether a severe high costume or an evening gown shall be used. The topics of backgrounds and accessories are discussed. All of these tinted carbon photographs are taken full length. Maybe the subject will pose as a dame of the first empire, with skimpy satin gown, elaborate coiffure, jewelled girdle, fan, vinaigrette. Perhaps she stands half turned about, with her back to the spectator, and her pure profile deftly thrown out on a dark velvet curtain. All women would not look charming in such a picture. The artist knows whom to choose, and the subject will wonder at her own beauty when she sees the picture. A wilful, coquettish girl is posed as a modern Priscilla. The quaint spinning-wheel and high-backed chair, the small-paned window at the back of the colonial room, form a charming contrast with her rich brocade gown and beaming face. The scant, puffed sleeves set off the rounded arms, the curve of the wrist. The hand that grasps the wheel is like a rare old painting, and the undulating outlines of the figure are suggested, not revealed, by the prim folds of the flowered silk rock. These latter-day photographs are like paintings, and are likely never to grow old-fashioned. They have the charm that distinguishes the portrait painters of the old English school. A charm that custom will not stale. They will not become out of date and grotesque, like the photographs of twenty years ago, found in family albums. In those days a woman was hired to put the lights in the eyes, color the cheeks and paint the ribbon bows and artificial flowers of the ladies and the gay neckties and button-hole bouquets of the gentlemen. The new photographs, be it a hundred years hence, always will be things of beauty, no matter what evolutions, contractions, or diminutions may befall woman's dress. —New York Sun.

TO MEASURE FOR PAPER.

Rules Which if Followed Makes This a Very Easy Task.

As different paperhangers pursue different methods in hanging paper, so there are various rules and forms for measuring rooms. We therefore append several methods, any of which will bring the desired result.

As most paper when trimmed is eighteen inches wide and twenty-four feet to a single piece, a piece will contain thirty-six square feet.

Measure the length and height of each wall in feet and multiply. Add together the number of square feet of each wall, getting total number of square feet. Divide this total by thirty-six, which will give you the number of pieces required for side wall. Allow one-half piece of paper for each door and window.

To allow for waste in matching it is safer to divide by thirty-three instead of thirty-six.

To find number of single pieces required for ceiling, multiply length by width, in feet, and divide by thirty-three.

A Mental Rule.—Suppose a room to be five yards long by four yards wide, which nets eighteen yards around the room. This is equal to thirty-six half yards or breadths of paper. For each door or window allow two breadths. Our example room having two doors and one window, we allow six breadths, which brings us down to thirty breadths. The room being nine feet high, we divide by five, which gives us a result of six double or twelve single pieces.

For a room seven feet high divide by six. A room eight or nine feet high, divide by five. A room ten or eleven feet high, divide by four.

vesting and early peas will need a "search warrant" to find them.

Mrs. E. A. Benson, Sophiasburgh, is visiting her daughter Mrs. Levi Moore, Napanee.

Miss Nettie Scott, Picton, is spending a few weeks with her sister Mrs. D. B. Cole, Green Point.

Mr. and Mrs. Elias Slater, and Mr. and Mrs. I. B. Tribbs, Yereville, started from home at 4 o'clock in the morning on Sunday last, and driving to Cressy a distance of some twenty miles arrived at Wm. T. Slater's in time for breakfast. They spent a pleasant day at this most beautiful and romantic spot (McDonnell Cove) and returned home in the evening. "Nothing like Coolican horses" is the unanimous verdict of the party.

The couple who drove to the ferry on Monday last expecting to make their way to Forester Island Park, got badly left and returned home somewhat early in the day, sadder if not wiser than when they started; however it is an ill wind that blows no good, and we have heard considerable talk about a water bicycle since then. Perhaps it has shaken up some new ideas in the region of the inventive bump in a certain person's head and we shall wake up some morning to find we have a genius in our midst.

DENBIGH.

Rev. Ernest Weber, late of Sterling, Nebraska, U. S. A. arrived here on the 14th inst. and is to take charge of the German Lutheran Mission of this place. He preached a very impressive sermon yesterday though his formal induction will not take place till next Sunday on which occasion we hope to have the pleasure of having the last incumbent, the Rev. G. Brackebusch, of Eganville, with us, who has kindly promised to install his successor in the place in which he for nearly seven years so indefatigably laboured. Mr. Weber is a native of Wurtemberg, Germany and expresses himself as being exceedingly well pleased with what he has been able to see of Denbigh and its inhabitants so far.

Mr. Herman Berndt another native of Germany also arrived here on the 14th inst., after some adventures. He intends to pay only a visit to his brother Erdman Berndt one of our citizens, intending to get a Ry. ticket in Liverpool, from Montreal to Kaladar station, he applied for one, but the applied to, seems to have been unpardonably ignorant of the existence of famous station in the Bald Mountains and persuaded Mr. Berndt that there was no such station in Ontario. He succeeded in selling Mr. Berndt a ticket for Callender, PARRY Sound district, where the weary wedged with M. A. R. Boyce, the popular. The Napanee branch of Stewart's coal yard. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. S. J. Shorey, of Lindsay, in the presence of a number of intimate friends of both the contracting parties. The bride was supported by Miss S. McKim, sister of the bride, while Mr. C. H. Boyce, a brother of the groom, acted as best man. Both the bride and groom are highly respected and esteemed in town and their host of friends will join us in wishing them many happy years of wedded life. The bride has been for a number of years a valued member of the Eastern Methodist church choir. The happy couple took the evening train en route for Cleveland, where they will spend their honeymoon.

In Memoriam.

At her late residence, Wilton, on Friday 14th inst., Eliza Warner, widow of the late Henry Pultz, for many years one of Wilton's most respected citizens. Mrs. Pultz was a daughter of the late Zadoc Warner, of Pennfield, N. Y., and was born at Balltown, Spa., in that same state. At the time of her death she was seventy-nine years of age. She will be missed in the community in which she resided by all, but more especially by those with whom she daily associated. Her illness was not an extended one but frequently during that illness she expressed a willingness to go whenever her heavenly Father saw fit to take her home. For several years prior to her marriage she was an inmate at the home of her cousin, the late Sidney Warner. She was a sister to the late Harvey Warner, of Cold Water, Mich.

Her remains were placed in the cemetery at Wilton by the side of her late husband. Funeral services at her late residence on Sunday, 16th, at 10:30 a. m. —Com.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR.

To the Editor of the Napanee Express.

An impression having gone abroad that a Sunday excursion train would be run to accommodate the members of the Methodist church and other people to reach the camp meeting at Varty Lake, I will be pleased to have you publicly give notice that no such train has been contemplated though asked for by our Colored Jubilee Methodists. Regular trains will take passengers at reduced rates and the Company will be pleased to make rates for society excursions to the camp meeting grounds. The eloquent colored divine, Dr. Mason, from Washington, D. C., is advertised to be on hand in all his glorious efforts.

Yours truly,
H. B. Sherwood, Supt.

"I Am Permanently Cured."

The Joyful Exclamation of Mr. Alexander Moffatt, of Millbrook, Ont.

Paine's Celery Compound Victorious After the Doctors Failed.

Mr. Moffatt is of the opinion that all his sufferings and troubles had their origin in liver complaint, a terribly dangerous malady that is dragging many a man and woman to the grave. This disease may be acute or chronic. In the acute form, there are violent burning pains conveyed to the shoulder and right arm, short cough, fever, irregular bowels and constipation. In the chronic form of liver complaint, there are many morbid conditions, such as enlargement, softening, abscesses and degeneration. The symptoms are, weight in stomach, flatulence, nausea, bilious vomiting, loss of appetite, thirst, white and dry tongue, bitter taste, and a host of other miserable conditions.

Long experience has fully proved that Paine's Celery Compound is the only medicine that can successfully grapple with the dread disease of liver complaint. Honest and able doctors are advising their patients to make use of Paine's Celery Compound for the great reason, that they know of no other medicine that gives such prompt and effective results. The cure of Mr. Moffatt amply proves every statement made in favor of Paine's Celery Compound, and clearly demonstrates the fact, that when physicians fail to cure, nature's medicine is sure to do the good work. Mr. Moffatt writes thus:—

"Having been a sufferer for years from severe pains in the side, back and breast, caused, I firmly believe, by a sluggish liver, I received the treatment of eminent physicians, and was compelled to wear a chamomile vest, but nothing seemed to do me good.

"At last I was advised by kind friends to try Paine's Celery Compound; and after using six bottles, I find that I am permanently cured. Paine's Celery Compound has indeed done wonders for me. You may publish this for the benefit of suffering humanity."

SLOAN CHEMICAL CO. Ltd. Toronto Ont.

In the case of Boston, Mr. Carter, of the Mayerick Oil Co., supplies the sample which he calls
"Water White 150 test." "We sell it," he writes,
"from tank wagons to the retail grocers at 83 cents per gallon, and it is sold to families all the way from 7 cents to 10 cents." Turning the American wine gallon into our Imperial gallon, these retail prices mean 8 2/5 to 12 cents a gallon.

To make sure that this oil could be sold in Canada, samples were submitted to Mr.
Thomas Fox, Inland Revenue office, and, after inspecting them, he gave the following certificate:

Inland Revenue, Canada; Division No. 17
Montreal, December 8, 1892.

Dear Sir,

I have tested the two samples of American refined oils received here on the 6th inst., one from Boston, the other from Rochester, N. Y.
They are first rate oils and stand a test much higher than the Governmental requirement. I am yours truly, Thomas Fox, Insgr.

This means, taking the lowest prices in both places, that coal oil sells at 83 cents in Boston which can only be got for 28 cents here. The Boston housewife takes three "dimes" out to the door and comes back with three gallons of coal oil in her can, and four cents in her hand. The Montreal housewife takes out three "dimes" and returns with only one gallon of coal oil and two cents. This is the result of the Canadian tariff and kindred governmental restrictions on the importation of petroleum.

The Beaver deals at great length with what Sir Richard Cartwright did, and what it thinks he will do if the Liberals are again returned to power. We again repeat that a 100 per cent duty on coal oil is not consistent with a tariff for revenue only, and so adjusted as to fall on the luxuries and not on the necessities of life. A 100 per cent duty on coal oil would be no more right eighteen years ago than it is today, although to use a stock Tory phrase, it may have been more justifiable to render assistance to the oil industry eighteen years ago "to allow it to become properly established." It was claimed by the designers of the N. P. that it was only a temporary expedient, to allow our "infant industries" to become established, until they were able to walk alone. These "infants" have been feeding at the public's expense for well on to sixteen years, and they are just as greedy, just as needy and just as weak as ever. It has been well pointed out that the present tariff is not adjusted for the purpose of securing the revenue necessary for the economical administration of public affairs in the easiest way for the people, but on the contrary is made the weapon of rings and combines through the operation of which they exclude foreign goods and secure the power to charge exorbitant prices for their own wares. The N. P. has snuffed out all the small manufacturing industries that flourished prior to its introduction, and the business that they did has become centralized in concerns like the Massey Harris Co. It is unnecessary to go outside of Napanea for an illustration of this.

The Beaver's statement that during the past few years sugar has been admitted in free, is quite in line with its usual standard of arguments. For whose benefit was it admitted in free? Was it for the benefit of the Canadian consumer? Raw sugar up to a few weeks ago was admitted into Canada free of duty for the benefit of the Canadian refiner, and for his benefit solely.
Beet root sugar not above 14 Dutch standard was also admitted free, but on refined sugar a duty was imposed. The Tory Government's manipulation of the sugar business has allowed a few men to amass great wealth, but in no way has it benefited the Canadian consumer. It has enabled Mr. Redpath, the great Canadian sugar refiner, to amass a fortune, and retire to the old country with it, where he lives in a style that would bankrupt an ordinary prince. Protection is no more nor less than legalized robbery. The Beaver may see much to commend in a system that allows a few men to amass wealth at the expense of the great body of consumers, and its elation over the fact that for the past few years sugar (raw, and not above 14 Dutch standard) was admitted free is great evidence of its "profoundity" and "wisdom." The Tory Government did not lessen the sugar duties until they were forced to do it, because the American Government abolished them altogether. For several years a bounty equivalent to nearly 2 cents a pound was granted to the sugar industry in Canada, and according to the present regulations it receives aid to the extent of one and a half cents per pound.

Our contemporary's other statements are equally in line with its assertions in this respect. This great deficit making N. P. is so arranged that of the $60,000,000 actual taxation taken out of the pockets of the people per year only $20,000,000 goes into the treasury of the Dominion. This was ably demonstrated by Sir Richard Cartwright in his speech on the Budget debate.

ABOUT CHATTELLE THE CRIM- INAL.

BATH, JUNE 10th.

While agreeing with what I consider to be the animating spirit of Mr.
Pringle's article on the above subject, namely that science should do its best with all its resources for the amelioration of society by the betterment of the individual human being, physical mental, moral, spiritual and phrenolog-ical; and while agreeing with some of his suggestions and differing from others, allow me to point out one conspicuous omission, which is an indispensable consideration in this matter, namely, the power of habit. No one becomes a great criminal on the spur of the moment, impelled by a strong uncontrollable rush and surge of overmastering impulse which he has never felt before, and which places him completely and slavishly and helplessly in the power of his passion as a result of his criminal development. The beginning of these things are small and early in the childhood, at a time and in a mode in which they can be easily conquered and restrained within proper and normal limits. "Train up a child in the way he should go and when he is old he will not depart from it." In childhood (either early or late) as the case may be fear may easily be inspired in order to act as a deterrent from doing wrong (that is one use of pain, to inspire dread of going in a course that incurs pain). While if the person, the subject of discipline, is left too long, fear may cease to have any power to decide his action; and he may accustom himself to shut out fear from having any place in the decision of his will, or resolution. As a common ordinary example of this, any one who will remember the high-spirited breed of horses that we had about here in this part of the country a few years ago, will recall the fact that they could be easily and successfully trained while very young, but if they were left until they were grown, then once get their high-strung temper up, no amount of fear had any effect in forcing them to act in any stated way. So it is often a fad with some people, and used to be countenanced greatly by a certain style of literature, that a manly person doesn't and shouldn't know what fear is, nor allow it to have any effect at all on his course of conduct; while the ordinary well-conducted citizen has and always has had a wholesome fear of several things, such as a fear of good and right public opinion, a fear of disgrace, a fear of getting into dark solitary confinement in jail, or a fear of losing his liberty in the penitentiary, or losing his life or happiness or health, &c., or a fear of offending too greatly or grievously or outrageously, the Deity, the establish-er of the right moral order, and sanctioner of the perception of right and wrong.

First let the parent or trainer of the child force the child's passions or wishes or emotions to keep within the correct bounds until the child can himself acquire the power of restraint and control. Then let him be instructed in the laws that society and public opinion and the state and religion impose as laying down the limits beyond which his passions and instincts and wishes will not be allowed to transgress; while still letting him understand that within these limits and conditions, the gratification of his feelings and wishes is allowable, not only so, but right and good and commendable. Such a person, with habitual self-control, and who daily and commonly, according to the most approved methods taught by religion and science, weeds out from himself the first beginnings of wrong impelling passions that threaten to engulf his nature and defy the mastery of reason;
such a person will and can never become a criminal.

I think that, to a certain extent Mr.

responsible very much for his crime,
and for his careless and cheap estimate of life; for when a person is used to seeing thousands killed for no particular reason that he can make out, why, the taking of one life seems to be almost a trifle; so that after all, Canada is probably not responsible for Chattelle. But still, although our country relegates to the parents and the churches the office of instructing the youth in the primary regulations, laws rules and principles of right legal social moral and personal conduct; it is plain and patent to the careful observer that the instruction thus given is often imperfect or defective or one-sided, and has not (even in its best exercise, which is very rare) that broad symmetrical thorough and well-balanced character that the advancement of the finishing nineteenth century should warrant. It is true that the sciences of ethics and political economy are taught in the universities, but in this case only a few are benefitted. But it is really the duty of the state to teach them to all its youth, and this could be done by making a small primary compendium containing all the general rules and principles that the proper political and social order demands; all these being stated in simple language and form, without going into the discussion of the abstruse fundamental theories that the philosophy of the subject would busy itself with. This is the method of procedure with all the subjects taught in the public school.
Results generally are given, while the abstruse philosophy that originally elaborated these results is not touched upon. And surely a congress, of our most celebrated thinkers, statesmen, philanthropists and christian leaders, could agree on the great ordinary rules of correct ethical, social, political and legal conduct, and the great general principles sanctioning these rules. As it is, the children of the public schools have no definite scientific practical instruction at all on these points, while they have the most careful and authoritative instruction on every other; so that the effect is to relegate all the thoughts and views about conduct and character to an extremely secondary and obscure place in their minds, compared with arithmetic, literature, and science generally.

It just occurs to me to say that no amount of fine cranial development or of almost any other kind of development could long withstand the bad pernicious immoral and dissipating influence of that one anarchic idea above referred to, "do as you please," which in so many forms is so potent and prevalent at the present time and this fact goes to show the supreme influence of an idea in shaping human action, and therefore the supreme importance of having just and correct ideas about what to do and what to avoid doing, and why thus to do and thus to avoid doing. I speak of this anarchic idea, because Chattelle's dictum that "it was for the best" is evidently the prompting of the idea that the best good in life is "to do as you please," which idea directly and radically nullifies all self-control and self regulation, and makes moral power a nullity—that is one wrong idea can make a man a moral idiot (to employ Mr. Pringle's phrase); for it puts the shaping of one's action, not in the hands of reason, but in the direction of what happens to be pleasing at the time.

NAPANEE, FRIDAY, JUNE 21, 1895.

SOME MISSTATEMENTS EXPOSED.

As remarked by an esteemed contemporary, the Montreal Herald, we believe, it has become quite a common practice for Tory newspapers to answer one issue by raising and putting forward another and a false issue. Our local contemporary, the Napanee Beaver, contained an article last week about a column and a half in length, purporting to be an answer to THE EXPRESS on the coal oil question. By raising issues totally irrelevant to the subject, by innuendo, personalities, and false insinuations our contemporary endeavors to shirk the subject at issue, and in almost every line its author gives evidence of his "pecksniffism." To those who have had an opportunity of seeing both sides as actually presented these exhibitions put our contemporary in a bad light, but it is willing to undergo that in the gratification it feels that it got ahead of us with the few whose source of information is limited to the murky light of its dark lantern.

In its issue of April 26th the Beaver published an article entitled "Protection on Coal Oil," in which it referred to the alarming frequency of coal oil lamp explosions in Canada, the number of persons thus burned to death, and the many homes and valuable property thus destroyed. These explosions it averred were due almost entirely to cheap American coal oil. It made this statement in the face of the fact that there is a high Canadian fire test on coal oil—HIGHER FOR THE AMERICAN PRODUCT THAN OUR OWN. We effectually exposed the Beaver's misstatement re the dangerous quality of American coal oil, and demonstrated, what is well known, that it is not only safer, but cleaner and better than Canadian coal oil. We also asserted that the Beaver had no more knowledge of the brand of oil used by the late Mrs. Tovell, of Toronto Junction, "whose clothing," it avers, "was so badly burned because of the lamp explosion of American oil" than she "died in the hospital next week," than the man in the moon, and this assertion it did not attempt to contradict.

The Beaver meets our statement that American coal oil is being retailed in the border cities of the United States for 8 and 10 cents a gallon, by saying it is only the cheap and nasty stuff that is being sold for that, "but any statement that a first class oil is being sold for that is simply false." This is the same species of "argument" as was indulged in in 1892 The Montreal Star, an independent newspaper, like THE EXPRESS, investigated the matter at that time and this is what it said:

"Some time ago we stated that good coal oil, such as we import here, was sold in Portland at the rate of twelve cents an Imperial Canadian gallon; a similar oil being sold here for twenty-eight cents. Some doubt arose as to the ability of this American oil to pass our high Canadian fire test, higher for the American product than our own, which led a Montreal importer to test the question by obtaining samples of the oil sold in the American cities and to submit them to our inland fire-engine inspectors. The samples were obtained from the cities of Rochester and Boston.

From Rochester, the wholesaler dealer supplying the sample, Mr. Everest, of the Vacuum Oil Co., writes that the sample is "the better quality coal oil sold in this market." It is delivered from tank wagons to retail grocers at 4 cents a gallon and is retailed from house to house by peddlers at 8 and 10 cents per wine gallon. Translated into Imperial gallons, these latter figures of the Standard Oil Co. and kindred monopolies in the United States. It speaks of the absurdity of accusing the Canadian oil producers of "heartlessness" in raising their prices in sympathy with the rise in prices in the United States. What THE EXPRESS really did say was that the Beaver was very harsh on the Standard Oil Co., characterizing it as one of the most unmerciful of all American monopolies, but it has nothing but kind words for our own coal oil monopolists who are every bit as unmerciful. Wherein are the people of Canada protected from the machinations of the Standard Oil Co. when our oil men follow where they lead. The price of coal oil here went up purely in sympathy with the machinations of the aforesaid Standard Oil Co., and we make this statement and take the risk of again having hurled at us from the Beaver pen such "gaul dipped" powerful arguments as the following from its last week's issue: "usual profundity," "make himself so ridiculous," "pitiable ignorance," "stupidity" and several other choice epithets from its extensive vocabulary. In conclusion, it informs us in its own offensive patronizing way that "THE EXPRESS has brought all this exposure of its own stupidity and ignorance on its own shoulders" and that for it waded in beyond its depth. The Beaver in this statement gives an exhibition of overweening conceit, distasteful at any time, but when thus paraded publicly it becomes nauseating. THE EXPRESS welcomes such "exposures," and we may state that the people of this county did not show their appreciation of the N. P. at last general election, the Beaver notwithstanding to the contrary.

We have no desire to enter into a mud-slinging contest with our contemporary, but we hardly feel inclined to allow the misstatements and falsehoods contained in its last issue to go uncontradicted. The malevolence displayed, and the manner in which it goes out of its way to attack and abuse the editor of this paper is a fair sample of the course the editor of the Beaver has pursued towards THE EXPRESS privately. We regret that we are forced to speak this way, but the Beaver instituted it, and although, perhaps, it would be better to treat its slander with the silent contempt that it deserves, we do not propose to do that. Of the editorial matter in THE EXPRESS it is only necessary to say that the fact that we have won the Beaver's animosity is a strong enough recommendation. When it devotes its editorial columns to belittle and abuse us we take it that no further commendation is needed. THE EXPRESS has always endeavored to conform with the amenities of journalism, and in dealing with our exchanges we have endeavored, whenever practicable, to give due credit for any item used. We are always on the lookout to get the very best going for our readers, and we are pleased to say that our efforts are appreciated by them. Re the Beaver's claim about "original matter," we will leave that with the intelligent readers of our paper to judge. But for the benefit of those who do not take THE EXPRESS we will make this proposition to our contemporary, and if it will comply with it we will be willing to let the matter rest there. Let the Beaver send a representative over to this office and we will show it a local item in THE EXPRESS, let it then refer to its issue of two weeks later, and it will find the same item with fourteen words carefully eliminated. Let it then publish the two articles in parallel, putting the date on which it appeared in each paper above them, and its readers will then have an opportunity of judging how its claim of "originality" is sustained. The Beaver advises us to use the scissors. It is quite consistent in giving this advice for its news columns have been supplied almost exclusively for a great number of years by the free and indiscriminate use of the scissors. Ex-compositors of that office tell stories of how they have "set" type there from Monday morning until Thursday night and the only copy put before their weary eyes was reprint from other papers. The larger portion of its local and county news is made up of clippings from exchanges. We may state in conclusion that we have never yet seen an "original item" in the Beaver worth copying.

Pringle is to be commended for drawing attention to the case. The old barbarous idea that ignorance of the law is no excuse for the person transgressing it, should no longer have any force with parents and trainers, and church teachers and with state teachers. The state wishes to have good citizens, let it teach its children the ordinary elemental laws and rules of proper legal conduct, also the simple principles of social order; do not leave the youth to form his ideas from the wild anarchic theories that are floating around through the cities. That wild theory that it is right and good and the best thing to "do as you please" always, which is the note of anarchism; what fearful power that has to break down all proper and legal restraint. And no doubt Chattle has imbibed that idea in his travels over the world as a sailor and miner. No doubt also, since the libertine notions of soldiers and armies is or are proverbial; Chattle's life as a soldier in the rebellion in the states is from becoming dirty and filthy. When pickers are at work, wash them, allow no bad or dirty fruit to be placed in the boxes. All imperfect specimens must be thrown out. Fill boxes neither to full nor too scant. Leave calyx and stem on strawberries. This gives them a much nicer and cleaner appearance when placed on the market. They also stand a long shipment much better and longer. Do not allow them to be pulled off, as much fruit is then mashed. This applies to all small fruits. Never pick raspberries and blackberries with stems on. Instead of pulling off the berry, roll it off. Never expose small fruits to the sun or wind. If stands are used see that they have a cover for protection. The accompanying cuts represent

It is fastened about the waist with a strap, and is used only for raspberries and blackberries. Be sure all boxes and cases into which fruit is placed are clean and well made. Covers must fit tightly, so no air or dust will strike the fruit.

In hauling to place of shipment always cover with canvas or some similar material. Direct all cases neatly and in one particular place. Place the consignor's name, as well as that of the consignee, upon every case. Ship only to reliable and trustworthy dealers and commission men. By neglecting proper preparation and careful shipment, much small fruit goes on the market in bad condition, bringing low prices and also injury to the reputation of the grower. —American Agriculturist.

MODERN - PROGRESS.

Another device for adapting the gas engine to the running of vehicles on ordinary roads is spoken of with commendation as a mechanical triumph by the scientific press. It is a tricycle mechanism, propelled by a two-horse power balanced gas engine, and, having been tested on various city streets under varying conditions of grade and roadway, is said to have proved in every instance satisfactory, being of easy control as regards starting, the regulation of speed, turning, stopping, etc. The machine is calculated to carry three persons on a single broad seat, though operated by one, with surplus power sufficient to trail one or two buggies or a loaded waggon, according to the character or condition of the road. It carries 12 hours' supply of gasoline, or two and one-half gallons, and easily attains a speed of from, say, 10 to 12 miles per hour on fairly favorable ground, and, being geared in such a manner that the movement of a lever increases or decreases the speed, enables the driver to climb grades of considerable pitch. It is claimed to be perfectly safe, is very simple in construction, the entire device being strong enough to withstand hard usage.

Why Gold Exists.

Before the Royal Society of New South Wales, a member recently presented a summary of the various reasons which have been put forth to account for the existence of alluvial gold other than the old and accepted one, that it has been set free by processes of disintegration. Details are also given of a large number of experiments made with a view to determine whether a nucleus of gold, immersed in a gold solution and in the presence of such substances as would be likely to occur in nature, will increase in weight, the conclusion being that gold is deposited when the nucleus is in contact not only with metalliferous sulphides and arsenides which form strong galvanic couples, but also with such substances as iron oxides, charcoal, graphite, sandstone, granite, quartz, clay and marble, which form but weak galvanic couples with the gold nucleus. It is doubtful he thinks, whether the common assertion as to the greater fineness of nugget as compared with coarse vein gold has any foundation in fact; with fine alluvial gold there is much of the same.

Making Dry Walks.

The accompanying sketch shows the proper way of making a dry walk about one's premises. The darker shading shows where a trench has been dug, at the bottom of which is laid a line of tile. The earth is then shoveled back into the trench, after the joints of the tile have been carefully covered with hay to prevent the loose earth from getting into the joints before it has become firmly packed together, some eighteen inches at the top being left open. A foot of cobble or broken stones is then placed upon the earth and well packed down; over this is spread six inches of gravel, slightly rounded from side to side. The gravel, and the rocks beneath, cause all water falling upon the surface to at once disappear, while very soon small channels will be formed, leading down through the earth to the tile drain. Not only will the walk be thoroughly drained in this way, but no small amount of land upon either side as well. One can thus by a little planning arrange his paths so that they may coincide with the lines where under-drains are needed for the benefit of the land. Drains under the middle of the driveway, and under some of the principal walks, may thus be made to serve a double and most useful purpose. If gravel upon the surface of a path seems too coarse and harsh for the feet, a little clay can be mixed with it, the whole making a very good and somewhat porous surface, though to secure the quickest withdrawal of surface water it is advisable to leave the borders of the walk wholly of gravel.

of silver and other impurities by solution, owing to the larger relative surfaces exposed. Furthermore, the author assumes that large nuggets could be artificially produced by methods used in his own experiments, and that gold is probably being so deposited at the present day.

Incinerating Garbage.

Experiments have lately been made in New York with a view to developing a means of incinerating garbage. That the device is effective for the destruction of scraps and, in fact, of everything save metal and ashes, there is little doubt. The furnace, which was built in a roofless enclosure near the East River, is simple in construction and inexpensive. There is no perceptible odor about the place, and the chimney gives out gas rather than smoke. The only time when persons standing within 50 feet of the furnace were made aware of the character of the contents was when an iron hood that covers the top of the structure was lifted and a new supply of scraps shoveled into the flames. Even this Richard A. Healy, the engineer and originator of the contrivance, promises will be overcome by a draught pipe, to be run down from the top of the furnace to the flue, through which a central coal flame consumes the smoke from other divisions of the furnace. Other furnaces similar to this one will be built more elaborately, of fire brick and steel instead of iron. There will be considered the possibilities of securing power from the furnace, which generates intense heat, and which could be readily utilized. By disposing of this power the economy of this method of destroying street scraps would be very materially increased, so that the sweepings of New York could be destroyed by fire, and even a profit secured to the contractor who does the work.

Air as a Timber Preservative.

Probably no better illustration can be had even at the present time, of the great importance of free access of air to woodwork as a means of protection against premature decay, than the results of an investigation, conducted a few years ago, into the causes of an accident in an expensive apartment house in one of the principal cities of the United States, in which a portion of one of the upper floors gave way, and, in falling, carried along corresponding sections of the several floors below, landing the whole mass of wreckage in the cellar. It was found that a fortunately unusual system of floor construction had been adopted in the building in question, the spaces between the wooden beams having been filled with ashes, presumably with the view of making a comparative fireproof structure. Whatever its merits in this respect may have been, there was no question whatever that the mixture of ashes formed a most efficient barrier against the access of air to the timbers, and any moisture that was inherently in them or afterward found its way to them through the tiling above, had little opportunity of being carried away by any ventilating air currents. The beams simply had to rot, and that comparatively quickly. In the subsequent work of reconstruction of the floors, however, good care was taken that they should not again suffer in the same way.

Mill architects generally appreciate the preserving influence of free air circulation so thoroughly that they carefully guard against even the painting of any floor beams which are open to the suspicion of imperfect seasoning. Where any moisture is still present in the wood a coat of paint or tar or anything else impervious to air, ordinarily looked upon as a protective agent, simply prevents this moisture from escaping, and thus, instead of guarding against rapid decay, really promotes it to a very material degree. Happily this circumstance is becoming properly recognized and is beginning to receive a due share of attention.—Cassier's Magazine.

LARGE BOTTLE 25 CENTS.

She was a very proud girl—quite a standoffish sort of a girl—and she came on board with a fixed intention not to speak to anybody. I noticed her while we were yet in the dock at Tilbury. You don't notice individuals as a rule, for everybody looks so like everybody else on a first meeting, especially when it is almost dark and a crowd of passengers hang about the ship's side, taking their last look at things ashore. But I noticed this lady at the very first. I was on deck, prepared to go with the steamship Atalanta to New York city, and I saw her alight from the train some hundred yards distant. I lost her until she stepped upon the gangway, and then I was confirmed in my impression that she was a remarkably handsome girl.

She came on board like a princess, and for some minutes disappeared. Presently I felt a strange sensation. She was positively standing beside me. There was no reason why she should have preferred any other locality, but the fact that she came and stood by the side of me certainly deepened the extraordinary impression she had made. Without presuming to stare at her, I got a glimpse of her fine profile and dark, haughty eyes.

The usual scenes were going on about us. I ventured a remark—foolish and trifling, no doubt—but hardly deserving the contemptuous silence with which it was received.

The last bell sounded, the gangway was withdrawn and we began to haul out of dock; but still she stood there and made no sign. I plucked up spirit and asked her if she was going to America—an absurd question, seeing that America was the sole destination of the ship. She turned and looked at me, said nothing and walked away.

It was a lovely night, and as we dropped down the river the passengers stood about in groups and enjoyed it. Several spoke to me and became quite sociable. She was on deck also until 11 o'clock, but sitting alone, and, so far as I could tell, making no comment upon the mystery of shadows sparkling with light aloft and ashore which the vessel glided past.

I kept at a respectable distance; but I saw the captain speak to her, and I'm sure he got subdued for his audacity; so I put it down to pride. I think she made an exception of the stewardess—in fact, I am sure she did—later on. There is a winning a good deal and the saloon banquets were better patronized. I returned to the deck after a capital luncheon, with one of Clark Russell's stories under my arm; and I filled my big pipe and meandered in the direction of my chair, intending to enjoy myself thoroughly. Imagine my rage when I found the chair absolutely gone! I rushed up and down the deck until I observed that everybody was bursting with laughter.

Suddenly, under the lee of the captain's cabin I came upon Millicent Bradley. Her proud gray eyes were dim and lusterless, the full, firm contour of the face was gone, and her rich complexion had changed to putty color. The self-reliant mouth sank at the corners, and was partly open, as if she lacked the vital energy to press her pallid lips together.

As I stepped before her and stared with astonishment and distress, she opened her eyelids just another sixteenth of an inch and murmured in the most die-away tone: "Oh, Mr. Franklin, I'm afraid I've got your chair. Do take it! Please take it!"

Of course I was instantly at her side, imploring her to keep the blessed chair forever, to wear it for my sake—not that she showed the slightest disposition to give it up.

For three days I waited upon her hand and foot, helped her with delicacies, told her funny stories—not about seasickness—recited poetry to her—my own, unpublished!—and—yes, I flirted with her.

And she? Oh, it did her good—brightened her up amazingly. She talked better than a photograph and we were all in all to each other. The doctor was a bit of a nuisance, presuming upon his medical privileges, you understand, and the captain pestered us; but I got my grip, as we used to say when I rowed in the college eight, and I pulled right through, giving them my "wash" all the time.

And so we drew nearer to Sandy Hook, and although I had to sit upon a camp-stool while I watched over her in my lawful capacity of landlord of the deck chair, I never enjoyed crossing so much in my life, and I've been over the Atlantic about twenty times on business.

But within a day's sail of New York a disaster fell upon the ship, so terrifying, so lurid, so indescribably horrible, that you will think me inconsistent in declaring that it increased my happiness a hundredfold and gave me in one hideous moment all the concentrated joy of a lifetime.

It had come on to blow again. A great bank of bubbling, purple clouds had arisen in the northwest as the night closed in, and while I was helping Miss Bradley down the companionway, driven from the deck by the ugly, threatening aspect of the sky, a blast of wind struck the vessel, heeling her over with a suddenness that forced me to cling with all my might to the banister, and Miss Bradley, with all hers, to my neck. For nearly a minute my chin reposed against the top of her head, but that ecstasy was vouchsafed to me no longer.

"LIFTING THE ALMOST-FAINTING GIRL IN BOTH MY ARMS."

surely be jesting—making light of it in panic-stricken bravado, else why was she so unmistakably overmastered by fear? Her face was set like marble, her eyes glared to right and left; her beautifully chiseled nostrils sniffed the down draught from the engine room.

As we stood there in the darkness, clinging to the side of the cabin and to each other she asked: "Are you sure there is nothing wrong with the ship—nothing?"

Her tone was so changed that I stared at her for a moment through the smother before asking the counter question: "What should there be?"

"What is this smoke?" she whispered hoarsely in my ear. Before I could answer there was a concussion above as if the very heaven had fallen upon the ship, and we were both dashed off our feet. I fell with my hand upon some metal work which the carpet did not cover. It was so hot it almost blistered me. I quickly scrambled up, and, lifting the almost fainting girl in both my arms, staggered with her to a cushioned nook close by. As I did so there came a rush of water into the saloon, sweeping over the floor, in waves as the oscillation of the vessel flung it from one side to the other; and as the flood receded to mass itself in another quarter, a cloud of steam arose, adding to the denseness of the prevailing gloom.

"Save me, Horace!" gasped Millicent—in that moment she called me by that name—"Save me, Horace, for the love of heaven!" I caught her to my breast like a child—she was a very full grown woman, and must have weighed eleven stone—I kissed her cheek, her eyes, her lips, and she never murmured. I strode with unwavering steps to the companionway with that lovely burden soot and supple in my arms. I sprang up the steps with a confidence I had not possessed in the calmest of weather, and presently stood with her on deck, the wind tearing at us like a legion of devils, and the rushing masses of water dashing over us from head to foot. It would have been too much for me, exposed to the full force of it, had not a handy to charm the stewardess to whom most ladies yield when a ship gets out to sea.

The next morning Miss Bradley (for that, as I discovered afterward, was her name) and I met at breakfast. I think all the passengers met at breakfast—at that first breakfast. She was there anyway, and fortune seated her at my elbow. I made some progress with Miss Bradley in furnishing her plate. Oh, she was all right at that first breakfast. The sea was like glass and the sweet morning air in the channel was very appetizing.
But the neighborly chat with which I tried to garnish the eggs and bacon met with little encouragement, and she committed herself no more than to the indorsement of my hope that we should have this sort of thing all the way. By "this sort of thing" I meant the glorious weather, not her monumental frigidity; but I don't think she took the trouble to analyze my conceptions.
All that day she wandered about the deck, with her dark eyes—they were dark gray in the sunshine—surveying the panorama of the old belted southern coast, or sat upon a bench by the saloon door, reading a book under the shadow of the awning which had been rigged up on the "promenade." The splendid lines of her figure showed to advantage in a neat gown of homespun. No one spoke to her, and she spoke to nobody.
At dinner I got a trifle forward by the aid of baked potatoes, but nothing to boast of.
There were several jolly women among the passengers; and particularly jolly they were on the score of the calm sea. Our time in the channel was as good as a picnic, and it seemed as if the prevailing merriment must tantalize Miss Bradley out of her prudent reserve. But it didn't.
The next morning when the steward called me at half past six o'clock for my bath, a breeze had sprung up, and the ship was lifting and rolling in it considerably. The breakfast table was but thinly attended.
Miss Bradley, however, came in and took her place beside me. Come, I thought, she is a good sailor. I'll amuse her with some anecdotes about those who are sick at sea.
I supplied her plate, and launched into a funny story. To my dismay, she suddenly arose and left the table—likewise the saloon, ramming her handkerchief into her mouth, as I assumed, to prevent the laughter which must unbend her dignity, and break down the icy barrier between us.
For five days her pride—or some other indisposition—buried her in the sacred seclusion of her stateroom. It was too bad!
During those five days we staggered through a lively cross sea, which made walking on deck a very awkward business, and I spent most of my time reclining in my comfortable deck chair.
It now occurred to a number of passengers that a deck chair was the thing of all others which they ought to have brought on board. The scanty accommodation of benches was inadequate for those who wanted to lie down at full length—"sleep it off," and the deck was not only non-ay-baritic, but offered indifferent anchorage;
those who made their bed on the floor experienced a constant tendency to slip and slide and roll as the Atalanta wrestled with the waves. It would not do.
Furtive glances were cast at my snug chair, which I had moored in a sheltered corner. Piratical attacks were made upon that chair whenever I ventured to quit it for a moment. If I took a turn to stretch my limbs, or went below for a book or an extra rug, I never failed to find on my return some interloping loafer ensconced in my nest and pretending to be fast asleep. I stood a good deal of this, and in a public transport of self-sacrifice wandered about like a lost dog. But I wouldn't stand it any longer. And I didn't.
I began to evict the intruders; at first with great delicacy: "Pardon me, I fancy you have mistaken my chair." Then with less compunction: "I regret that I must disturb you; I am not feeling very well." And later without ceremony or remorse: "Now, sir, my chair, if you please!"
It came to this, that I got quite "rusty," and acquired the habit of folding up my chair whenever I left it, affixing thereon a notice: "This chair was brought on board for the owner's use. All others keep away."
This manifesto brought upon me a great deal of chaff. A petition was got up, requesting me to "take the chair" at a meeting to be held for the purpose of denouncing monopolies. A band of young fools serenaded me with a chorus of "Chair, boys! Chair!
He'll sleep until to-morrow!" And there were other attempts at fun almost as feeble.
They kept this up so persistently that, being out of sorts through the rough weather, and also on account of the prolonged absence of the girl with the dark gray eyes, I became as surly as a bear.
On the sixth day the sea had gone down

As the ship sailed, Millicent parted from me, sprang down the few remaining stairs, grabbed at the hand rail and whisked away to her cabin sans adieu.
I struggled back to the deck for the rugs and cushions and found the vessel enveloped in a furious storm. Already it was dark, and the Atalanta was plunging like a reitive horse, the sea coming in floods over the bulwarks and the wind tearing and shrieking among the cordage and blustering against the big roaring funnel. The rain came down in slanting sheets of water and the sailors were shouting to each other and warning the passengers who had delayed getting below. I lost one of my rugs, and what I saved my life I can hardly tell. My deck chair I left strapped to its moorings and took refuge in the smoke rooms with half a dozen other white faced sailors.
With the greatest difficulty we got to our staterooms and I clambered into my berth, simply shedding my top coat on the floor and kicking off my sopping shoes. I lay on my back with my elbows wedged against the side of the bunk to prevent myself being pitched out by the violent rolling of the ship, and listened to the smashing of glass and crockery and the crash of hat boxes, bags and other unsecured trifles, which were flying about like pins in a dice box, and to the shuddering whirl of the screw as the water dropped away from our stern and left the great flanges to beat the air.
The steward came and put the lights out, a red tape proceeding which added to the awfulness of things in general. Then I began to get unacceptably warm. It was summer time and with portholes closed the atmosphere below decks was almost stuffy;
but never before had I felt such an oppression. I concluded that we had gone into the gulf stream, or something of that sort, and they had closed all the ventilators for the sake of keeping the ship watertight.
I had to lie there in a bath of perspiration, for I could not get relief by taking off my clothes. To unweave myself in order to make the attempt would have resulted in my rolling out on to the floor, where my shoes and a water bottle and a careless companion's razor case were having a perfect frolic together.
I grew parched with thirst. Every moment the air became more unbearably ten minutes more and I gasped aloud: "I must get out of this or die!" I flung myself down, taking my chance of the razors, and groped out of the door. A stifling fog hung in the saloon. The dim light of the swinging lantern showed it to me. Peering about me with almost blinded eyes I perceived that from every stateroom abutting on the saloon one or more passengers had crept out like myself and were standing at each opening like specters, holding on deperately to anything. The saloon seemed to be doing its best to subvert itself. At times the floor was almost perpendicular.
Now I was lying flat upon the outer wall of my cabin; the next instant I was hanging from the rail that ran around it, as if I were a trapeze performer. All about there was a pandemonium of tumbling things.
The sea thundered against the vessel fearfully, and again and again there was that horrible shudder of the screw.
Near me crouched an old gentleman in night attire. "A nice thing, this!" he bellowed in my ear. To save discussion, I agreed with him that it was very nice indeed.
Across the saloon was the cabin dedicated to Miss Bradley. I detected a ghostly figure there and made my way over, holding fast to the chairs and the table. Yes, it was she, white as the dressing gown that swathed her graceful figure. She grasped my hand. Her dark eyes gazed into my face with a terrible expression.
"Thank God, you have come to me!" she cried with passionate earnestness.
We had grown very good friends during those few blissful days of her com-valecence, but only by maintaining a rigid barrier of the most respectful ceremony. How I blessed the accommodating tempest which made her now speak to me like that!
I kept her hand in mine and brought my face close to hers—I had to do this to make my conversation intelligible, there was such a racket. "It's all right!" I shouted. "Only a gale of wind. Bit of a sea on. You're quite right to turn out if you feel nervous."
She shook her head. "Oh, the storm is nothing," she replied.
"Nothing at all?" I assented, scoldingly, as if I had been used to "high seas and howling winds" from infancy. But in my heart I did not agree with her. She must sailor coiled a rope about us and hitched us on securely. He bound us heart to heart, and I stood with her so through the flying hours. There and then and thus I told my love to her—and she listened to me. She made me swear that if the ship's company had to take to the boats I would go with her. If that could not be she begged me to let her stay and drown with me.

Oh, what a glorious time that was; with the storm beating me almost senseless, the ship a furnace beneath my feet. The utter hopelessness of boats living in such a sea, should the fire break through the battened down hatches and drive us from the vessel.
The last shock had evoked a wail of alarm from the surrounding cabins, and the saloon became crowded with people rushing out of their doors. But when they found the floor surging with water and that white vapor floating upward, there was a perfect shriek of dismay: "The boilers have burst! The boilers!"
Supposing the water to be scalding I im-munitively placed Millicent Bradley at full length upon the couch. There was no time to save myself, and I let out an unmanly yell as the waves lapped me right up to the knee. It seemed to bite the flesh from my bones. I can stand pain—I used to play foot ball in England—but you just put your stockings feet in boiling water and try that! In a jiffy I was perched upon the top of a small table, and clapped my hands to my injured extremities, but strange to say, I was not scalded at all.
The water was cold. Others found this out simultaneously. And yet the steam was rising.
The meaning of it flashed upon Millicent first of all—or, perhaps, this phenomenon only confirmed a fear—"God help us!" she cried; "the vessel is on fire."
The words flew like lightning. All rushed pell mell out of the saloon and up the stairs to the deck.
Never shall I forget the dawn of that day; the clouds glaring spitefully as they flew away before the sun; the waves covering into silliness; the storm wind screeching in baffled passion—and my deck chair gone!
They had found the fire and extinguished it; and with the morning light came the cry of "Land ahead!" from the lookout.
We should get through it all safely, then;
and beyond lay—paradise! Not the same paradise that we had contemplated in the dark hours, but still paradise; such a one as I would be contented with for all the rest of my life.
* * * * *
A pilot joined us. We steamed into Sandy Hook. They steered the battered hulk of the Atalanta into the grand harbor of New York under as goodly a sun as ever smiled on lovers.
Millicent Bradley once again stood by my side and spoke no word. Her dark eyes surveyed the shore and took stock of the monster excursion steamers, the Statue of Liberty and the Brooklyn Bridge; but she made no comment. She had not referred to that sweet night of terrors since I found her standing on the promenade deck neatly dressed for going ashore.
We passed the Battery and drew near to the company's landing stage. Presently we were being hauled into the dock. In five minutes the gangways would be run up, and we should have to go ashore. And up to this time, although I had told her all about myself, my family, my position and my prospects in life, all unimpeachable, she had not confided to me any of her own affairs, not even her destination. But now she turned to me and looked me squarely in the eye. "You were very kind to me last night, Mr. Franklin," she said, in tones that I fancied trembled a little.
"Mister!" I stammered, agast at her boldness.
"I am very grateful—I shall always be Don't think badly of me for being so weak and foolish. I could not bear"—she hesi-tated, and shook back a tear that seemed about to sparkle in her eye as she corrected herself: "I should not like you to—despise me."
"Oh, Miss—Millicent!" I began.
But she went on firmly: "Of course, we must not take seriously anything which circumstances—so exceptional—so very, very dreadful, indeed—we must not bind ourselves by what such circumstances forced upon us. We will say 'good-bye' now; and
—and if—if we never meet again—"
"Millicent!" I cried, catching both her hands, quite heedless of onlookers. "don't coquet with me after what we have both gone through! You can say calmly to me,
'If we ever meet again; I say to you,
'Must we ever, ever part?'"

THE NIGHT-BLOOMING CACTUS.

A Gigantic and Beautiful Bloom Which Flourishes at Los Angeles.

A flower grown out of doors the year round surpasses one which has to spend half its year in an artificially heated room with little sunshine and less oxygen. The superiority of California flowers is no miracle and no accident, but the logical and inevitable result of more favorable surroundings.

The night-bloom cereus is a plant much admired by amateurs in the East, where it is blooming as a social as well as botanical event. It is needless to say, however, that an Eastern invitation to come and see our cereus bloom means an indoor affair. But it is not so here. Cereus triangularis is one of the most showy of the night-blooming cacti. The branches are triangular, very thick and heavy, with few short spines. Outside, it grows to immense proportions. If planted near a dwelling its great branches flatten themselves against the side of the house, sending out long, pale yellow, adventurous roots on either side, which attach themselves tightly to the wood, until the stems become hardened, when they loosen, tury gray and hang like fringes of string. Plants bloom from cuttings in a few months. The time of blooming is from July until November.

The buds are at first like rough balls. As they increase in size they develop into a gorgeous flower, with a scaly and pale green stem. They begin to open at about 5 o'clock in the evening, and close at 10 in the morning—except on foggy days, when they remain open until the sun comes out. The flowers measure from nine to twelve inches from tip to tip of petals, and twelve inches in length. The sepals are greenish yellow, the broad inner petals fine creamy white, like satin. The stamens lie in the centre like a skein of silken floss, their creamy anthers surrounding a magnificent large, light yellow velvet pistil.

In this country the plants gives no seed unless the flowers are fertilized by hand. When this is done it bears a splendid large fruit of a beautiful deep

BEAUTY ON THE BENCH.

A Pretty Girl Once Sat With California's Supreme Court.

"Few People" are aware that a woman once sat on the Supreme bench in California," said ex-Secretary of State Thomas Beck. A look of incredulity overspread the features of his listeners.

"It's a fact, nevertheless," continued Mr. Beck. "It was in—Well, never mind the year, but I was then secretary of state and court was being held in Sacramento. Judge Wallace was on the bench and among those in the capitol city during the session was Col. Shafter and a number of his officers. The colonel was accompanied by his daughter, a very young, bright and handsome miss.

"One morning at the breakfast table in the Golden Eagle Hotel, Justice Wallace said: 'Miss Shafter, I feel quite slighted. Since you have been in Sacramento you have not deigned to visit me. Won't you come up this morning and sit with us in banc? My colleague, Judge Crocker, is absent, and you might as well occupy his seat.'

"Oh, yes, I'll come," returned Miss Shafter, and the subject was dropped and I am sure Judge Wallace never dreamed that the invitation would be accepted.

"About an hour afterward, Miss Shafter, accompanied by one of the officers of her father's staff, came to my office and said that she wanted to go to the Supreme Court. Would I take her? With pleasure. And away we went. A young attorney was arguing a case when we entered the court. He did not notice us as we quietly seated ourselves, and went on with most brilliant eloquence. Judge Wallace laid his hand on the arm of the empty chair and nodded to my companion to take it.

"Shall I go up?" she asked of me.

"Why, certainly," I responded. 'It would be discourteous to the bench not to do so.'

"She hesitated a little, but as Judge Wallace regarded her with a smiling invitation and patted the chair provokingly, she arose and firmly and with the grace of a queen, walked up the aisle to the platform. The judges arose and gravely bowed. Wallace stepped forward, and, extending his hand, escorted her to the vacant chair and each justice was presented to her in turn and shook the tiny hand of their dainty associate. Miss Shafter was quite equal to the occasion, and, bowing, took her seat and let the case proceed. That young attorney, though, lost his head, and afterwards lost his case. Whether he wished to make an impression on the new associate or whether the strangeness of the proceedings rattled him, I never learned, but he got badly tied up in his peroration.

"What did Judge Wallace do? Why, at dinner that evening he conferred with the new judge, and insisted upon her occupying the seat on the bench next day. After dinner he asked me to take a walk with him. 'Beck,' said he, 'if you bring that girl into court in the morning I'll have proceedings instituted to declare your position vacant.'—San Francisco Call.

HAIRDRESSING A LA MODE.

Crimping and Waving New the Most Salient Features.

Of the many items which constitute fashionable hairdressing, says The Lady's Pictorial, crimping and waving are the most salient features. Fringes will never go utterly out of fashion, but the arrangement differs from season to season. Just now the fringe is short, light and closely curled, and most of the curly rings are turned back, while a few strays in studied carelessness over the forehead and temples.

In the lower figure the pompadour frizette is again used to support the hair which is closely waved and drawn back, giving a slight glimpse of a center parting. Where the hair is thin, limp or has been excessively cropped for the old splendid large fruit of a beautiful deep rose color. The rind is composed of large, pointed scales, tipped with green—the blossom end somewhat resembling that of the pomegranate. It is spherical and measures from seven to eleven inches in circumference. When cut open a pulpy, translucent centre is disclosed, dotted with shining black seeds about the size of large pinheads and soft like fig seeds. The pulp is cool, juicy and delicately sweet. It is surrounded by a broad band of brilliant carmine about three-eighths of an inch wide, which makes a striking contrast and renders it a most picturesque fruit for the table. Cut in halves, sprinkled with sugar and eaten with a spoon from its deep, clammy cup, it is dainty enough for the most fastidious. By some the taste for this fruit might have to be cultivated, as is the case with olives and figs, but it looks good enough to eat—and almost too pretty.—From the Land of Sunshine.

Telephones.

Tricks over the telephone wire have always been popular, and the public is every ready to hear of a sermon preached in one city being heard by a second congregation whose minister has disappointed them in a place in the State; of a metropolitan concert being shared in at quarter prices by an humble audience in a distant village; and of the gay Parisian, who can drop into the telephone office and hear what is going on in all the theatres of Paris. As a rule, such exhibitions as these are more curious than really useful, but occasionally they are of the utmost practicality and value. At the last annual staff dinner of the National Telephone Company, at the well-known Holborn restaurant in London, there was great disappointment among the 200 present that the president of the company was lying on a sick-bed at Folkestone. This, however, did not hinder him from saying to the assemblage exactly what he would have said had he been present. A telephone was taken into his room, and over this he spoke directly to the chairman and the reporters, whose heads were fitted with receivers. The speech was afterwards given to the meeting, its reading being listened to by the far-off president, who also heard the applause with which it was received. Finally, the chairman wished him, through the telephone, good sleep, pleasant dreams, and a speedy restoration to health, and bade him good-bye and good-night. There was a wide awake lawyer who, starting for a real estate sale in New Jersey, a few days ago, found, on arriving at his expected destination, that the sale was to be at a town twenty miles off, and the hour at which it was fixed was already at hand. As it was impossible for him to reach the other town in time for the sale, he went to the nearest telephone, and put in his bids over the wire. What is more, he secured the property, following his successful bid by train, and signing the necessary papers.—New York Times.

Snow in the Sierra Nevada Mountains.

I have seen four feet of snow fall in eight hours, said Conductor Cobb of the Maine Central, to the Lewiston Journal man, and yet it was so light that you could wade through it almost as easily as you can through water.

It was in the Sierra Nevada Mountains—a sort of frost-like snow that falls in the night, burying everything. Twelve feet away from another man you can just see him, with a sort of halo around him, as though somewhere the sun was shining through the storm. In these storms it is impossible to tell direction or distance. One is simply lost when only a short distance from camp.

In the morning we walked down into town. One man went ahead breaking the snow, which came nearly to his armpits, as he moved through it. He would tread until tired, when he would drop to the rear, and some one else would lead the procession. As we walked into the valley it grew less, and down below in the town there had been no snow, and all the time the sun or the stars had shone. Such a snow goes like the dew—disappears, evaporates.

COOKING ON THE TABLE.

On a moderate-sized table and the oven for baking is shown in the second cut. On the table in the first cut are an electric griddle, for which great efficiency and cleanliness are claimed; frying pans and chafing dishes, a plate warmer, broilers and stewers.

To show the efficiency of the outfit and to prove how far-reaching the general introduction of cooking by electricity would be, a company of a dozen friends

was invited to a dinner of six courses, which was cooked in the dining-room of the host by the lady of the house, with the help of a butler, the entire preparation consuming less than an hour and a half, during which time the lady found time to converse with her guests and superintend the setting of the table besides. It must certainly be admitted that while taking up very little space, and insuring absolute cleanliness, this way of cooking is superior to the old way in many respects. The total absence of heat in the room where the cooking is done cannot be praised too much, as every housewife will testify with pleasure.

Cycling Jokes.

"That's a curious typographical error," said Mrs. Partridge. "The title of this new book is printed 'The Viking Age.'"

"Well, why not?" asked Partridge.

"What ought it to be?"

"Why—Biking, oughtn't it?"

"How would you conjugate the verb to bike, pa?" asked Johnny.

"Bike, boke, biking, bak," said Mr. Knowitall. "Can you remember that?"

"I guess so," said Johnny. "Bike, buok, broken back. Is that it?"—Harpers' Bazar.

In Advanced Years

The strength and pure blood necessary to resist the effects of cold seasons are given by Hood's Sarsaparilla.

"I have for the last 25 years of my life been complaining of a weakness of the lungs and colds in the head, especially in the winter. Last fall I was again attacked. Reading of Hood's Sarsaparilla I was led to try it. I am now taking the fifth bottle with good results. I can positively say that I have not spent a winter as free from coughs or pains and difficult breathing spells for the last 25 years as was last winter. I can lie down and sleep all night without any annoyance from cough or pain in the lungs or asthmatic difficulty." E. M. CHAMBERS, J. P., Cornhill, N. B.

Why is it that men are so ready to believe what they want to believe, even when they know mightily well they don't believe it; that women kiss at parting and meeting though they don't want to, and they know perfectly well that it's a nuisance all round; that a wife will profess her utter contempt for her husband's judgment, while knowing all the while that his good judgment was displayed in his choice of a wife.

Moved to Picton.

That well-known citizen, George W. Goodwin, removed from his old stand on Dundas street to Picton this week. We regret his departure for many reasons but principally because of the loss of a genuine reformer to the party here. We wish George all the success he deserves. We may appropriately append here a foreign opinion as to the merits of Mr. Goodwin's chart, called "Pharaoh's Dream." It is from the pen of Mr. J. McParlin, and is addressed to the chairman of the "People's Party."

Dear Sir and Bro.,--You received a letter, while at St. Louis, no doubt, addressed to you by George W. Goodwin, Box 377, Napanee, Ont., Can., relative to a chart which he has had copyrighted in the United States and Canada, illustrating production, transportation, consumption, communication etc. in a peculiarly marked and able manner. The chart, either by printed or oral instructions may be easily understood and in the hands of persons who fully understood it, it will do more good than the ablest speech, unaided by the deductions naturally drawn from its full definition and application. The chart is known as "Pharaoh's Dream" and can be made peculiarly interesting in the hands of a chalk artist who may intersperse his talk with illustrations upon a black board. He is willing to give a reasonable royalty to the national Committee for handling his charts.

I have met Mr. Goodwin personally and I requested him to write you, he has recommendations from the leading business men of Canada and statesmen of that Province, regardless of Party. He has a reputation of being one of the ablest writers of economic philosophy in the Dominion; he is a very scholarly man, of pleasing address and good appearance.

I feel that the adoption of his chart would result in much good.

Mr. Goodwin spent one entire evening illustrating the chart to me and I am free to confess, although I have met many reformers, never before were the schemes of the money power in its devilish, intelligent, all powerful organization met with such a clear perspicuous criticism, so plain that one who ran might read, as it did at the hands of Mr. Goodwin in the space of that one evening, and proper explanations of his chart will make the most skeptical opponent put on his thinking cap.

I am deeply in earnest in hoping that you will bring this matter before your Congressional Committee and take such actions as will result in our reaping a reward of this able man's creation.

Largely owing to the efforts of Dr. Leonard, the indefatigable secretary of the Napanee cricket club, there arrived in Napanee on Sunday evening a party of cricketers from Illinois, whom we will term the Gentlemen of Chicago, and the name is no misnomer. They are all gentlemen in the true sense of the word, and to use a sporting phrase are "cricket players right from the drop of the hat." The thanks of the cricketers of this district are due to Dr.

A Victory for Napanee.

An interesting foot ball match was played at Bath on Monday evening, when the Scarlet foot ball club of Napanee met and worsted the Bath team by three goals to one. The game was hotly contested from start to finish and some brilliant playing was done by both sides, but the superior combination work of the Scarlets was very apparent. The Bath boys are comparatively speaking a new team, and with a little more practice, and a little more attention to combination work will make it decidedly interesting for other teams before the seasons closes. They are a gentlemanly lot of fellows, and our boys are loud in praise of the courteous treatment, and kindly reception accorded them by the foot ball club, and the good people of Bath generally. Mr. Herb Ashley made an impartial and efficient referee and his decisions gave entire satisfaction. The Napanee team was composed as follows: goal, E. Hayes; backs, W. Ashley, S. Skates; half backs, Capt. W. B. Haines, R. Ham, Wm. Grange; Forwards, W. Exley and P. Preston, C. Fox, F. Grieve and P. Wagar.

Walking for his Health.

W. J. Thaler is the name of a tall, stout, innocent looking Austrian who called on THE EXPRESS on Wednesday morning. He carries on his breast a silver badge on which is engraved in French and English the information that the bearer left Montreal on May 13th to walk around the world. From what we could learn from the somewhat unintelligible English of Mr. Thaler he is out on the expedition for the good of his eyes. Some time ago he lost his sight and a pilgrimage to the shrine of St. Anne de Beaupre he alleges partially restored his vision, and he thinks by visiting the great religious shrines of the world he will completely recover his eyesight. He has a book in which the chief of police of each of the cities and towns that he has visited certify that he has called upon them on such a day, and the signatures of editors of various newspapers along the line are affixed to the statement that he called upon them on a given date. Thaler expects to make the round trip in about seven years. He carries photographs of himself and disposed of a number. He put up at the Royal hotel on Tuesday night and left for Belleville Wednesday afternoon.

Wedding Breakfast.

The show window of our enterprising Confectioner, W. H. Davis, came in for a great deal of inspection on Saturday last, and the many flattering remarks passed on Will's exhibit of a wedding breakfast is proof of its value as an advertisement. Mr. Davis had caused to be placed in the window a small table and on it was arrayed a complete wedding breakfast, comprising jellies, roast goose, a handsome wedding cake, beautifully frosted and figured, wine, and other desert the whole being tastefully set off with flowers of various kinds. The array of good things filled one with a laudable desire to be an invited guest at a wedding where Mr. Davis was the caterer. The people of Napanee have reason to congratulate themselves on having such a skillful caterer, and we feel assured that persons contemplating matrimony will patronise him, in preference to going out of town, as is too often the case, for what they can be supplied with much better at home. During this leafy month of June Mr. Davis has acted as caterer for several of the most fashionable weddings of the season, and on every hand one hears nothing but flattering remarks about the banquets prepared by him.

week of cricket will do much to boom the game and enhance its popularity here. Mr. Helliwell, a former manager of the Dominion Bank here, induced the Chicago eleven to take the trip, and his many friends in Napanee were pleased to see him again after an absence of about ten years. The first of the series of matches that the club has played with the teams of this district took place at the Napanee Driving Park on Monday, and resulted in a victory for Chicago by an innings and three runs. It was no disgrace for Napanee to be beaten by this team, and we are safe in saying that in defeating our cricketers the best team in the district was conquered. The Chicago men are excellent batters, and good bowlers, but it is in their fielding that they shine, and to see them scoop a ball you would think they were an aggregation of crack base ball players. Mr. J. Cummings is no doubt their best batter, and he ran up a score of 32 runs. The other Chicago men making a double score were Messrs. T. and C. Ballingall. Napanee's bowling was good, but the fielding was somewhat weak. Our boys played in somewhat hard luck, apparently. Messrs. Richardson, G. E. Maybee, and Dr. Leonard succeeded in making double scores. Mr. F. Richardson as wicket keeper did excellent work, and Mr. J. Cummings in a similar capacity for the visitors. The following is the score by innings.

NOTES.

Dr. Leonard entertained the Chicago and Napanee cricket clubs and a number of their friends by giving a smoking party at his residence on Monday evening. A most enjoyable time was spent.

Mr. Archy Clark photographed the Chicago cricket club during an interval of rest in Monday's game, and at the conclusion of the match a photograph of the two clubs, together with a number of ladies, was taken.

The Napanee cricket club chartered the steamer Heinder yesterday afternoon and took the Chicago team and a number of other friends to Glenora.

The final match, which will be played at the Napanee Driving Park to morrow, promises to be an exciting contest. Chicago will play against a team composed of selections from the cricket clubs of the Bay of Quinte district.

Chicago defeated the Kingston cricket club by an innings and 40 runs.

We learn from the Intelligencer that the cricketers of Belleville are angry at the Chicago eleven for their action in cancelling their engagement to play there yesterday.

Rev. T. D. Phillips is one of the oldest cricket players in Canada. He was at one time a resident of Ontario, and one of her ablest players.

There are 8 Englishmen, one Scotchman, one Irishman and a Canadian in the Chicago team.

A Pleasant Trip.
On Friday last, according to previous arrangement, a number of the members of the County Council with two or three friends paid a visit to Reeve Filson, of Amherst Island. It was resolved to leave Napanee at 6 o'clock a. m., by Capt. Holmes' steam yacht "Dorothy," and by half past six the Napanee party were all "on deck" and a start was made. The morning was exceedingly fine with a cool breeze blowing just strong enough to make a pleasant ripple on the water, and yet just warm enough to make everyone feel comfortable. Shortly after leaving Napanee a halt was made down the river, and Mr. J. C. Carcassien taken on board, and when nearing Deseronto a halt was made to pick up Mr. Oliver, who came off in a boat to intercept the steamer. From here a pleasant run was had to Glenora, where the party stayed sufficiently long to make arrangements for supper on the return trip. From Glenora to Stella was then in order, and the "Dorothy" was soon going along in great style with plenty of steam, and behaved handsomely in the somewhat troubled water. It is a delightful trip from Napanee to Stella quite long enough for most people and yet not too tedious, as the route is a charming one, the ever changing landscape and the sparkling water being a continuous source of delight, especially to anyone who does not too often go upon the water for a trip. Even the beauties of the river and the bay may pall upon those who often visit them ; but on such days as last Friday, when nature was in one of her brightest and most enjoyable moods, the old wayfarer must have felt some thing of the subtle influence of the time. The party on board the Dorothy enjoyed to the full all the novelty and beauty of the trip, and not one had any "tired feeling" when Stella was reached, which was about midday. A short stay was made in Stella while rigs were procured to transport the party across the Island, as Mr. Filson lives about two miles from Stella. A short drive brought the party to its destination, and there the sad part of the trip commenced, as it was found that Mr. Filson was not so well as he had been for some days previously and that he was confined to his bed. Mrs. Filson very kindly received the visitors, and one by one all had a short interview with the sick man, who was much gratified with the visit. As it was not desirable to make a long stay, the party resolved on a drive around the eastern end of the island ; which is somewhat picturesque, and was delightful on this particular day because of the breeze blowing off Lake Ontario, which cooled the ardour of the sun's rays and made being out doors at this particular spot delightful. The lilac trees and syringas were just in the full beauty of bloom, and the fruit trees were laden with promise of a large crop, in this part of the island, everything here being two weeks later than more inland, consequently the vegetation escaped the late frost which was so fatal to lots of fruit and flowers around Napanee. The late- ness of the season and the freedom from late or early frosts is of course due to the nearness of the large lake. While driving back to Stella a good view of the small islands called "The Brothers" was obtained, as also of the causeway leading from the small island almost to Amherst, which is the more advisable just now in consequence of the low water in the lakes. Reaching Stella the wind was found to be blowing rather freely for a return just then, there- fore a desultory ramble and chat with the good folks of the village ensued until the

the pleasure seekers. The "Dorothy" left the sparkling waters rapidly behind her, and disclosed the glorious panorama of this part of the Bay of Quinte, under the favourable conditions of a setting sun and an almost unclouded sky. It was dark ere Glenora was reached, and from this point homeward a brilliant starlight night was enjoyed. Just enough light to steer by and that was all. But Napanee was reached in the early morning, and this time "that tired feeling" had generally got the better of the party, the different members soon bidding each other "good morning," and seeking the arms of Morpheus.

Capt. Holmes received and earned the thanks of the travellers for the outing enjoyed on his beautiful yacht, and for the urbanity and kindness extended too much praise cannot be given ; but we know the captain is a modest man and does not desire us to enlarge too much on his achievements as a captain and an enter- tainer. The company are ever so much obliged for the trip, however, and as the captain made an offer of an outing at any time himself and his yacht were disengaged, it will not surprise us to hear of a "repeat," or a trip somewhat similar before the season gets too far advanced.

Base ball.
Newburgh and Odessa played a game at Newburgh on Saturday last. The game was very friendly throughout and the umpiring of Mr. Denyes of Odessa pleased everybody. Score :
Newburgh..... 1 0 10 3 1 2 6 0 1 —24
Odessa..... 1 3 0 1 6 0 3 2 6 —23
Struck out by Newburgh 10, by Odessa 7. F. Cairns burst his finger in the fifth innings but pluckily caught the game through. Yarker plays at Newburgh to-morrow. It will be another close game.

Some Modern Superstitions.
Are you superstitious ? It is astonish- ing in this age to find how many people believe in signs. Some folks fancy it is unlucky to fall overboard on Monday, or to take hold of a buzz-saw in motion on Tues- day, or fall down stairs with the baby in your arms on Wednesday, or to walk underneath a ladder and have it fall on you on Thursday, or do any blessed thing at all on Friday. But all agree that it is very unlucky to go to church on Sunday with- out wearing one of raddford and son's celebrated regal shirts.

Douglas v. McDougall.
As the date of the contest approaches in- terest in the bicycle race between the two noted Scotch riders, McDougall and Doug- las becomes intensified. For some time back a spirit of friendly rivalry has existed between them, and to each all doubts at rest as to which is the faster rider, they have consented to ride once around the race track at the Driving Park this (Friday) evening at 7.30 o'clock. To afford every one an opportunity of witnessing this epoch making race no admission fee will be charged. Come early and avoid the jam at the gate.

Hymenial.
The residence of Captain Rankin, South Napanee, was the scene of a pleasant event on Wednesday when his daughter, Miss Florence Rankin, and Mr. J. F. Chalmers, of Adolphustown, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony by the Rev. D. McEachern. Miss Rankin is a decidedly popular young lady and she carries away with her the kind wishes of many friends for her future happiness. Mr. Chalmers is the popular reeve of the township of Adolphustown, and the youngest member of the county council of Lennox & Addington, and we join with his numerous friends in extending our hearty congratulations.

was to be dismissed at a meeting of the school board to be held on Tuesday evening, in conse- quence of some differences between him- self and the principal. A number of the heaviest ratepayers in the town thought more light was desirable before any action should be taken, and therefore petitioned the board to have a full and impartial investigation into the causes of the trouble, or else to let both the principal and science master leave. When the school board met on Tuesday evening there were a number of the petitioners present. The report of Mr. Seeth was read anent the trouble, and the recommendation of this in- spector seemed to be that one or both the gentlemen should be replaced by new men, because the trouble between them was injuring the school. A motion was made by Messrs. Preston and Cowan that a science master be advertised for. An amendment was offered by Messrs. Her- rington and Pruyn that a principal and science master be advertised for ; or that a full investigation be made by the board into the cause of the trouble, to locate the blame. After some discussion the latter part of Messrs. Herrington and Pruyn's amendment was voted on, and carried by 7 to 3. There will therefore be an investigation. The chairman, Mr. H. M. Deroche, named as a committee of enquiry : Messrs. Pruyn, Preston, Her- rington and Cowan. Yielding to a uni- formly expressed wish, Mr. Deroche consented to be chairman of this special committee, whose labours will commence at once. We must call the attention of the public to one part of Mr. Seeth's re- port, where objection is made to one teacher being allowed to occupy his time instructing one pupil, and informing the board that another teacher would be needed if this were to continue.

Today he is a wanderer without friends or money, having spent everything for liquor. The man was discharged.
